

Portability and conversion: How employees can continue their life insurance

Decisions to make,
steps they can take.

When can an employee convert or port life insurance?

This table shows the circumstances under which they are eligible to convert or port their coverage.

When employees' life insurance coverage is ending — either because they are leaving the company, they've become disabled, or they are no longer eligible for coverage — there are steps they can take to preserve their life coverage.

Depending on their circumstances, employees have two options for keeping their coverage:

1. Conversion

Change their group term life coverage to an individual whole life policy, which builds cash value. They pay the premium at individual rates. The right to convert their policy is guaranteed by law under certain circumstances.

2. Portability

Take their group term life coverage with them and pay for it at group rates. This coverage does not build any cash value. This option is also called "porting" coverage.

Employer role and responsibility:

Notify employee of continuation opportunity within 31 days of the loss of coverage date.

Also, because life premiums are based on age, your premiums will automatically increase every five years after you port.
Will my coverage be reduced as I get older?	No. Your benefit will remain the same.	Yes. Employee and dependent coverage will reduce on an age-related schedule, according to the group plan. Note: The employee can convert the difference between the age-reduced coverage amount and the prior amount.
Can I increase my coverage?	No. Once you have converted your coverage, you cannot increase it.	Yes. Life insurance coverage may be increased with evidence of insurability (medical exam and/or questions) up to the maximums shown above. You may also decrease your coverage, as long as it remains within plan guidelines.
